Here are 5 ways to improve your email subject lines

#1 Avoid Spammy Words

Try not to use typically used salesy words like; Sale, discount, coupon, free, limited time offer etc. These words and terms are quite often ignored and in some cases trigger spam filters

#2 Keep It Short

Don't over cook it, It happens all too often a summary of the content in the email is in the subject line. Be sure where possible that your subject line is 50 characters or less

#3 Personalise It

Adding personalisation such as their name or something specific to their interests can drastically improve open rates

#4 Create Curiosity

Creating mysterious or ambiguous subject lines can hook people in to open your email out of curiosity. Try not to overuse this as it will become tiring for your recipients

#5 Experiment

A, B test various subject lines by splitting your audience in half. Experiment with capital letters, emojis and using 'Re:' on the off occasion can improve results.
